University of Birmingham	The Department of African Studies and Anthropology brings together a wide range of disciplines spanning arts and social sciences - history, sociology, geography, politics, language, literature and anthropology (both cultural and development-oriented) - and fosters interaction between them. The diversity of regional and disciplinary perspectives is unified by a common focus on local knowledge, a commitment to long-term field and archival work in Africa and the Caribbean, and collaboration with African and Caribbean colleagues.	You can apply to study abroad for a year in an approved university around the world. If you achieve a grade of 2.1 or above in your first year then you will be invited to apply for a Year Abroad in your second year. If your application is successful, you will go abroad in your third year and return to us for your final year. Find out more at birmingham.ac.uk/yearabroad . As a Single Honours student in the Department of African Studies and Anthropology you can also apply to spend a semester abroad at one of our carefully selected partner universities, where we have close personal ties with academic staff. If your application is successful, during your time abroad you will be able to study modules in related subjects, including topics specific to the place of study. It is possible to attend universities where all the modules offered will be taught in English.

We have one of the largest and most diverse Anthropology staff compliments in the UK, and all our staff are research-active on an international level. We offer both Year Abroad and Year in Professional Practice options, boasting an extensive local and international network of industry and academic partners. Facilities-wise, we curate one of the largest skeletal repositories in the UK on behalf of the Canterbury Archaeological Trust which students have the opportunity to work with as part of their training in human skeletal biology. We have one of the largest Bone Clones teaching collections in the UK, offering students the opportunity to work with hyper-realistic models of all major fossil hominin finds and the skeletons of all major primate taxa. The new Life Sciences Imaging Centre offers students the opportunity to engage in original research that makes use of our micro-CT scanner and/or Artec Space Spider 3D laser scanner and 3D printing facilities, as well as our powerful Virtual Palaeoanthropology Computational Suite. We also host an exceptional bone and dentition histology lab that is similarly available for student research. Finally, our School also hosts the UK's only Ethnobotany Lab, underpinned by some of the UK's most focused ethnobotanical research and teaching.
